

BRILLIANT HOME WEDDING

At the Residence of Ex-Mayor and Mrs. Henry F. Peck—Marriage of Miss Cordelia S. Peck and Mr. Edward H. Everett—Over Three Hundred Guests—A Beautiful Scene—Magnificent Array of Gifts.

At the residence of the bride's parents, ex-Mayor and Mrs. Henry F. Peck at 1305 West Chapel street, last evening at 5 o'clock, occurred the wedding of their daughter, Miss Cordelia Stanley Peck, to Mr. Edward Hotchkiss Everett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Everett of Whitney avenue. Both the residences of ex-Mayor Peck and Principal L. L. Camp were thrown open for the convenience of the guests. Rev. W. W. McLane of the College street Congregational church performed the ceremony in the front parlors, the couple standing between the two large windows, which were banked with ferns, palms and an abundance of asparagus. In the front drawing room and again in the library, directly back, there were ropes of holly and laurel, stretched loosely from the four corners of the room to the chandelier in the center. At each corner were satin ribbon bows with long floating ends. In the front room of the color was white, with a suggestion of canary yellow in a few of the chrysanthemums. The decorations of the hall were of green laurel and asparagus, with the staircase balustrade wound in laurel, great sprigs of asparagus and fluffy chrysanthemums tied in with satin ribbon at effective intervals.

The bride wore a handsome gown of heavy brocade white satin, with tulle veil. The veil was caught with diamond and pearl sunburst, the gift of the groom. A small prayer book in white suede was carried instead of the usual bride's bouquet. The maid of honor was Miss Hattie Sturtevant of South Framingham, Mass., who wore ice-green brocade with trimmings of white chiffon. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The best man was Richard Everett, a brother of the groom. The ushers were Arthur Everett of Buffalo, a brother of the groom; Frank Cornwall, a cousin of the bride, and Edward Zinner of New York. The bride's gift to the maid of honor was a brooch of Roman gold set with pearls. The groom gave diamond stick pins to his best man and ushers.

The supper served by the well known caterer, Mr. C. A. Bradley, was an elaborate one, the table being handsomely set with a massive silver centerpiece, which was brilliantly illuminated and hung with small and roses with an abundance of carnations and chrysanthemums. It was one of the most successful catering efforts of the year in New Haven. Well's orchestra furnished excellent music.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lawrence of New York city; Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Peck of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Peck of New York, Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Draper of New Milford, Mr. Edward Zinner of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Yates of Plainfield, N. J., Justice Briggs of Danvers, Conn., Mrs. L. C. Smith of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Cornwall, Mrs. Mary E. Foster, Miss May Foster, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peck, Mr. and Mrs. Martin S. Ward, all of New Britain, Conn.

Among the New Haven guests were: Judge and Mrs. Lynde Harrison, Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. DeForest, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Downs, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Gessner, Miss Gessner, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Burwell, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. William B. North and family, Mr. and Mrs. Albert York, L. L. Camp, Miss Kate Gehrm, Miss Osborn, Miss Harriet Lum, William Lum, James Hemmingsway, Miss Harriet Munson, Miss Florence Clark, Miss Mary Alden, Miss Ella and Miss Helen York, Miss Nellie Holcomb, Miss Hattie Arnold, Miss Laughlin, Miss Marie Hotchkiss, the Misses Smith, the Misses Buford, Robert E. L. Hutchinson, Horace Sanford, Stephen Baker, Frederick Lloyd, J. W. Hemmingsway, Robert Graves.

The couple left on an early evening train for New York and will go south for a few weeks.

The wedding gifts were many and costly, including elegant silverware and cut glassware in profusion. There were 190 presents. The groom's father gave the bride a building lot on Everett street adjoining his home. The executive officers of the Southern New England Telephone company gave the bride a handsome onyx table with pedestal lamp. She was also the recipient of a check for a large amount from her father.

A Brilliant Wedding To-night at East Pearl Street Church

To-night at 8 o'clock Miss Anna B. Way and Mr. William F. Bishop will be united in marriage at the East Pearl street M. E. church. A host of friends will greet them. The church will be beautifully decorated for the occasion. There will be a large attendance. Over 450 invitations have been sent out, and the happy couple are both very popular young people. Miss Way is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Way of 217 Exchange street. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bishop of Warren Place, and a bookkeeper for David H. Clark, the noted contractor and builder.

Rev. Mr. Cheney will tie the knot. The brother of the bride will be the groomsmen, and Miss Clara Jacobs of Maltby street the bridesmaid. Two little girls will act as flower bearers, one of whom is Miss Jennie Frances, sister of the bride, and the other Miss Isabella Preston. The bridesmaids will be Misses Louise and Sadie Bishop, sisters of the groom.

There will be a reception at the house, 217 Exchange street from 8:45 to 11:30 p. m., after which the happy pair will start on a wedding tour, going to Philadelphia and Washington. There is a magnificent array of wedding gifts, numbering fully 500 in all, which speaks of the popularity of the young couple. Miss Way is a well known pianist and teacher of the piano, and is a member of the East Pearl street M. E. church.

The Baptist Churches.
The Baptist churches will hold a union Thanksgiving service at Calvary Baptist church Thursday at 11 a. m. Sermon by Rev. F. W. C. Meyer.

THOMPSON AWARDED $935.

Committee on Condemnation Reported Yesterday—Water Company Thinks the Award is Too Much.

Eugene S. Thompson, who owns the land over which the New Haven Water company proposes to utilize for the tunnel in East Haven, was yesterday awarded $935 damages by the committee which has been hearing the condemnation proceedings brought by the Water company. The attorneys of the Water company think that the sum awarded is rather high in view of the fact that an aqueduct is to be run through the larger portion of the strip of Mr. Thompson's land that was asked for and it will be placed at such a depth that the soil above it will be as good for farming purposes as any other part of Mr. Thompson's land. Mr. Watrous of Watrous & Buckland, who represent the Water company, said yesterday that he could not tell whether they would appeal or not, as it had not yet been decided.

The amount awarded is about what was estimated by County Treasurer Jacobs as a just estimate of the damages.

Cott Case Compromised.

Colonel Cott will retain the family mansion in Bristol, R. I., and the payment to the wife will be a sum of money in full settlement.

Big Russian Contract.

Bethlehem, Nov. 26.—The Bethlehem Iron company received word from St. Petersburg yesterday that the company has been awarded the contract for 1,500 tons of armor plate for the new Russian battleship Rostislav. The contract represents $600,000 and will keep the ordnance works, employing 2,000 skilled workmen, busy during the winter.

Two Killed in This Wreck.

Shoemaker, N. M., Nov. 26.—By the wrecking of a passenger train on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad last night two persons were killed, two fatally injured and seventeen others seriously injured. Those killed were: M. S. Russell and F. D. Whitney, postal clerks. Benton Cunningham, newsboy, and J. M. Roth, a freight conductor, were probably fatally injured. The other injured persons are: D. D. Fuller, John Mackin, Theodore Maldano, wife, daughter and two children; A. D. Monroe, George Anton, John Cohen, J. R. Murphy, W. K. Hodges, fireman; Engineer Bourne, W. H. Brown, chair car porter, rib broken.

DEFENDED YALE.

Mrs. Poter's Remark Concerning the University—What a New York Pastor Said at a Nathan Hale Banquet—What Rev. John C. Collins Said Last Night.

New York, Nov. 26.—The Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate church, in his address last night upon Nathan Hale at the banquet of the Sons of the Revolution at Delmonico's, took occasion to reply to the attacks of Mrs. Poter, who said recently that she would rather have her boy in hell than in Yale.

He referred to the simple virtues and manly Christian character of the patriot spy, who was graduated with honor from Old Eli.

"And this man," said Dr. Burrell, "was educated in Yale. I am aware that it has been said recently that there is no choice between Yale and Gehenna. You will not take it amiss if in this presence, where there are so many Yale alumni, I refer to it here."

"A Yale alumnus sat in the chair of the presiding officer at that convention and heard what was said with silent approval—a man who, as a student, was dragged from his room for inebriety. At length he was, through classmates, led by an influence which is not fostered in school to renounce his vices and to lead a better life. He entered the Christian ministry, yet he, a Yale man, showed his face here that day and refused to pay tribute to his alma mater."

"A Yale alumnus should not have left the floor of that convention without entering a word of protest."

"Oh! sharper than a serpent's tooth To have borne a thankless child."

The doctor's sentiments were loudly applauded.

Rev. Mr. Collins, secretary of the Christian Workers', when interviewed last night in regard to the above said the New York pastor was in error concerning Mr. Torrey, as Mr. Torrey defended and eulogized Yale, as newspaper reports show, and favored the resolution at the convention sustaining New Haven and Yale, which provoked the remarks of Mrs. Poter, which have excited so much comment.

Rev. Mr. Collins said he had written yesterday a personal letter to Rev. Dr. Burrell on the subject, calling his attention to the fact that Mr. Torrey was not silent when Yale was assailed but made a strong speech in defense of his alma mater.

Mr. Collins added: It was in order to defend and vindicate Yale that Mr. Torrey was willing to have the resolution introduced. He said in his remarks that he kept silent as long as it was a personal matter, but when he saw that the remark was likely to do harm to Yale and this city, he wished to do everything possible to correct a false impression concerning remarks he was alleged to have made.

TO FIGHT OFF THE TIE.

The Game To-morrow at Yale Field Between the Opposing High School Teams—It Must Be Decided if It Takes All Day.

Manager Foote of the Yale Football association has ordered the tie game between the Bridgeport and Hartford high schools to be played off at the Yale Field to-morrow (Thanksgiving day) at 10:30 o'clock. The championship of the Connecticut interscholastic league lies between these two teams, who have twice met to decide it, but in both cases a tie game resulted. The winner of Thursday's game will be awarded the cup offered by the Yale Football association.

M'CORMICK-ROCKEFELLER.

The Wedding Took Place Yesterday in the Bridesroom's Apartment—One of the Illnesses of the Groom—A Scene of Magnificence at the Church.

New York, Nov. 26.—Miss Edith Rockefeller, youngest daughter of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, the multi-millionaire, was married to-day in the Buckingham hotel to Mr. Harold F. McCormick, son of Cyrus McCormick, the well known "reaper king" of Chicago. The marriage was, but for the sickness of the groom, to have been solemnized in the Fifth avenue Baptist church, and the beautiful interior of the edifice had been transformed into a tropical garden. Shortly after 11 o'clock the bride, accompanied by her sister, Miss Alta, and her cousin, Miss Emma, her father and mother and all the bridesmaids, arrived at the Buckingham hotel. They had been preceded by a few minutes by the gentlemen, who were to have acted as ushers at the church. The Rev. Dr. W. H. P. Faunce and his assistant, Dr. John Hall, arrived about half an hour later. The wedding party went directly to the McCormick suite. The rooms had been beautifully decorated in the morning, pink and white chrysanthemums, interspersed with tall over-spreading palms, being exclusively used. The rooms were enveloped in a glow of soft light, presenting a very effective picture. The groom had arisen about 10:30 o'clock and dressed himself in his wedding suit. His best man, Stanley McCormick, his brother, was with him during the morning and helped to cheer him up. Mr. McCormick was feeling quite weak, but had recovered sufficiently to leave his bed with safety.

The guests formed in two rows on either side of the room, leaving a center aisle for the bride and groom to walk through. There was no bridal procession. Mr. McCormick and his best man stood at the side of the minister, near the head of the room. The bride entered from an adjoining apartment, leaning on the arm of her father.

The bride wore a rich white satin gown, made in Princess style, with long train and a white veil of considerable length. Both the front and corsage were draped with point lace, and the veil was also of point lace. This was fastened with the bridegroom's gift, a superb tiara of diamonds and emeralds. The gowns of the bridesmaids, which were the gift of the bride, were spotted gauze draped over satin, and trimmed with fuchsia of lace, four of them rose pink in color, two of white, and one, that of the maid of honor, a delicate mauve. Each bridesmaid carried a veil of Russian sable fur and wore a velvet hat of similar hue, trimmed to match the color of the gown.

The wedding ceremony was quite short, beginning at 12:05 and being concluded at 12:30. The Rev. Dr. Faunce officiated and Dr. Hall assisted.

The wedding party remained in the hotel some time. Later they were driven to the Rockefeller mansion on Fifth street, near Fifth avenue.

At first it was thought that the bride and groom would go to the house together and receive the congratulations of their friends, but owing to the heavy downpour of rain the physician advised Mr. McCormick not to leave his room. The bride remained with her husband until 1 p. m., when, escorted by her father, she left for her former home to attend the reception and wedding breakfast.

His death resulted in almost precisely the same manner as that of the late Mrs. Schofield, who died a year ago. Mr. Schofield was twenty-four years old and engaged in the paper and printing business with his father. His death is a great affliction to his father and a large circle of relatives and friends.

The funeral will be attended to-day at 2 p. m.

OLYMPIA'S HARD LUCK.

The Story of the Misfortune That Overtook Hammerstein's New Venture—One of the Victims of the Explosion—A Swift Change of Scene at the Play House, from Merriment to Sudden Death.

New York, Nov. 26.—Shortly before 10 o'clock this morning the boiler in Hammerstein's new Olympia theater at Broadway and Forty-fifth street exploded. Frederick Welns, an electrician, aged twenty-five, was rendered unconscious by the shock, and, falling face downwards in a pool of water in the basement, was drowned. Andrew Hughes, aged thirty, of Newark, N. J., was fatally scalded. He was taken to Bellevue hospital. These others were scalded:

John Russell, badly scalded and taken to Flower hospital; Eugene Cetta, scalds of hands and face; George Johnson, William Johnson, Frederick Richards and Robert Taylor, all scalded on hands and face.

James Hayes, assistant foreman of engine company 54, when returning to his quarters, fell from the engine and was severely injured.

Gillott, the engineer, said that there was a light pressure on the boiler at the time of the explosion. He heard a cracking in the main pipe and started to run out. Before he reached the street he was knocked down by the concussion.

The exploded boiler was situated almost under the sidewalk and close to the Broadway entrance to the theater. The scalded people were taken across the street to the Olympia pharmacy, opposite the theater, where their injuries were dressed.

The direct cause of the accident was a defect in the elbow of the large feed-pipe running from the boiler into the steam chest of the engine. When the explosion shattered the elbow, the entire pipe fell with a crash, allowing the steam to rush out in volumes, blinding those who were in the room at the time.

The only outlet from the boiler room was a narrow opening in the sidewalk, reached by a long ladder. Up this ladder the injured men groped their way through clouds of steam, many of them with the flesh on the face and hands almost parboiled.

Harry Hammerstein, Jr., says that the officials from the building department had inspected all the boiler's pipes and pronounced them perfectly safe.

The building was not damaged, and the engine and other machinery are uninjured with the exception of the pipes.

PERSONAL.

Dr. M. A. Cremin, who was taken suddenly ill with nervous prostration at his home on Olive street Monday, was attended by Drs. Russell and O'Connor and by his brother, Dr. Cremin of New Britain, who was notified by telegraph and arrived in this city Monday night.

The cause of Dr. Cremin's breaking down was the result of overwork. Yesterday he was very much improved and it was thought he would be about again in a few days.

Architect Levi Haynes is drawing plans for an addition to the union chapel in Woodmont. The addition will be 23 and 45 feet, and will enlarge the seating capacity of the chapel one-third. It will contain a kitchen, dining room and ladies' room.

Mr. Lowry had traveled most of the time since he left Yale, and had just entered business in New York, when he was attacked with a hemorrhage and passed away after a brief illness on November 15. He was a son of the late Commodore Lowry of the United States navy and was twenty-five years old. Lowry was a graduate of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., but left Yale at the expiration of his sophomore year to travel. His home was in Erie, Pa.

TOBACCO AND LONG LIFE.

Westport Has Two Nonagenarians Who Stand on Both Sides of the Question.

There are two men in Westport, both drawing near the century mark, who are arguments for or against the use of tobacco, as one chooses to take it. One has passed his ninety-third year as an abstainer; the other is now in his ninety-first year, having used tobacco as a smoker more than three-quarters of a century.

In his ninety-fourth year, Horace Staples, president of the First National bank, presents physical proof of what non-indulgence brings about. His life work began really in 1819 as a school teacher. He had been taught to avoid the use of tobacco in any form. He soon learned that a chewer or a smoker applying as a candidate for a teacher's certificate had little chance of success.

He kept as far away from tobacco influences as possible, and thus held his papers for more than eight years. In 1854 he yielded to temptation, smoked and chewed now and then. In 1857 he decided the indulgence was useless and stopped it. In 1859 a violent attack of toothache was relieved by chewing old Virginia plug. At nearly ninety-four his step is firm, his mind and memory active and acute, and his hand steady, so that his autograph on bank notes is dashed off with the boldness and character of those signed by him forty-three years ago.

As president of the Westport Historical society he has supplied details of events which otherwise could not have been obtained. Flipping on the outlay he would have made by the use of tobacco from the time he was fifteen till now, seventy-nine years, at $130 a year—a reasonable estimate—a round $10,000 would have gone up in smoke, but to-day he can lay his hands on a sum in cash even greater than that as a result of letting it alone.

In his ninety-first year Elnathan Wheeler is as strong in body and active in mind as most men at sixty, and more than three-quarters of a century. His fine constitution physically and mentally is a refutation of the claim that the use of tobacco inevitably injures health and shortens life. For more than fifty years his smoking was so continuous as to become an actual abuse of the need. At 1850, when he retired as a manufacturer, he decided to take only three smokes daily from a clay pipe—once after each meal. To those who dined with him on his ninetieth anniversary he remarked as he drew on the clay and saw the curling smoke that his habit had been beneficial rather than injurious. Mr. Wheeler is a great reader, the Bible receiving a large share of his time, but he keeps abreast of public affairs through the papers. He has been a deacon in the Congregational church for more than a generation.—Westport Hour.
